Hello Ashlee. I have a couple of things that I used in my winery operations some years ago. After I retired and moved to Idaho I hung on to them thinking that I could use them in my "hobby" vineyard and winery here, but I haven't used them and it's time to see if someone else can use them. They are:

1. Is a Prozone ozone generator. We used this machine to sanitize our IBC tanks and our 10K gal tanks for wine storage, and to ozonate our equipment wash water. It serves as a pretty effective sanitizer especially if the operator adds just a tiny bit of K₂SO₄ to the water. Photos attached. Asking $300
2. Is a portable, gasoline powered, Franklin centrifugal pump. It is a high volume, high head "trash" pump capable of moving large amounts of must or water from one location to another. We used it on our crush pad when the impeller pumps couldn't handle the mass or volume. Photos attached. Asking $150.
